

Glenn Currier Owner and Editor

Glenn is a born-again Christian with a varied background and story. He is a former college professor where he taught sociology and conflict resolution and was the director of Conflict Resolution Studies. He has a Bachelor of Arts and a Masters Degree with substantial post graduate work. He received an Excellence in Teaching Award from the prestigious Piper Foundation and as well as an Excellence in Teaching Award at the multi-campus college's annual gathering. He directed a large National Science Foundation grant program, as well as another grant program from a national association headquartered in New York City. He has made presentations at various venues including a convention of the National Association for Experiential Learning in Washington D.C. Glenn was the content specialist for the nationally televised telecourse, The Sociological Imagination. He was also secretary for the Texas Mediation Trainers Roundtable and was the web master for that organization.

In spite of his professional accomplishments, Glenn made the decision to devote the rest of his life to writing and his own spiritual growth. He is very involved in his local church community and believes that it is in community and social relationships where we encounter the Christ. Glenn studies the Bible and has been richly rewarded with joy and grace in his faith walk.

His spiritual journey has been very circuitous, having practiced Buddhism, Taoism, Native American Spirituality, and Unitarianism. He was once an agnostic and thought of himself as a seeker, always also a writer. He was Sunday School Superintendent and has also taught Sunday School at his local church.

Despite a near lifelong student of Sacred Scripture, he does not claim to be a biblical scholar, but has an intense attachment to the Bible as a source of practical wisdom and truth. He has developed several websites but now maintains only two of them including ChristAliveHere.com. He is also an amateur poet and posts his poetry on two international poetry websites. In his home town he established a poetry group called Poetry in Progress which published a book of the members' poems, and he maintained a website for that group.
